Report of the School Board.

Every year brings its changes and our schools for the most part, have been wisely managed and efficiently taught. Of the ten different teachers employed the work of nearly all has been satisfactory. Most of them have shown a faithfulness and devotion which should entitle them to the gratitude of the parents. The quiet and business like air of the school room, the firmness of the discipline and the pleasant relations existing between teacher and pupils, which we have observed in most of the schools, have been very pleasing.

It would be very gratifying to the teachers in most of the schools if the parents would take interest enough in them to have their children go to school without the necessity of the Truant officer calling on them. We have had to resort to his services in quite a number of cases and find that we shall be obliged to try the reform school for some before they will realize that the laws of the State must be obeyed.

I do not believe in the divine right of kings, but I do insist upon the right and duty of parents to control their children during the years of their minority. But not in the way that some do, by sending their children to school a day or two and allowing them to play up and down the street for the next week.

Such children are not so happy as those who have been faithfully trained and perfectly controlled by wise parents.

The school is the expansion of the family. Teachers and school officers are the assistants of the parents in the important work of educating their children.

The principle upon which the school and family are governed is the same, and the method of discipline varies only with the circumstances.

When the school is placed in charge of teacher, the parents are no longer in control, but should co-operate and sustain the teacher in his control and management.

All discipline is based upon authority, and whether the parent or teacher is ruler, his authority is absolute.

No teacher can be successful, or accomplish satisfactory results without the sympathy and co-operation of the parents.

The advancement of our schools is largely what the parents make them.

What is needed is co-operation, parents should become acquainted with the teacher by visiting the school, teachers with parents by visiting pupils at their homes.

If there is one desire firmly implanted in every parent's heart it is for the welfare of his children, and every true teacher would seek the highest good for her pupils.

If then, the teachers' and parents' work, are one aim, why is it we hear so much of lack of co-operation between the two? simply this, they are not acquainted.

Some of our pupils we think stand second to none in the State when compared with those of the same age.

Would that politeness was more earnestly taught. In one we noticed it was taught well—yes, the little ones by a motion knew their teacher's requirements and most willingly complied, thus helping themselves and teacher to a higher standard. It costs nothing, may it be dispensed more freely.

Neatness in and around the school-rooms was suggested last year. In nearly all this year there was nothing to criticise, yet in a few we are sorry to say criticism was needed.

The annual examination of teachers will be held at Center school house June 8, at 9 a m.

In order to maintain our present standard we should have a school year of at least thirty weeks. It will be impossible to do this unless extra money is raised.

Repairs are also necessary.

Dated at Northwood this fifteenth day of February, 1901.
